Baseball promoters conclude deal for territory

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

River City Baseball officials announced yesterday that two more bricks had fallen into place on the Triple-A baseball stadium project in West Sacramento.

The baseball promoters have landed Pacific Bell as a ten-year "founding corporate partner" and sponsor for the stadium. While the price of the deal wasn't disclosed, the Sacramento Bee reported yesterday that an estimated $2.5 million is pledged.

River City Baseball's Bob Hemond told the News-Ledger yesterday that the Pac Bell deal contained many different elements, and it was tough to put a pure cash figure on its value. He declined to provide an estimate.

"We are thrilled to have Pacific Bell as founding corporate partner," team owner Art Savage was quoted in a press release yesterday. "Their extraordinary commitment is integral to the success of this endeavor and we are proud to have such a prominent member of the community as a part of our team."

Pacific Bell's vice president was likewise enthusiastic.

"We're the home team, and we value the relationship we have with the Sacramento area and the people we serve," she said.

River City Baseball also announced that, for an undisclosed price, they had successfully finished negotiations with the Stockton Ports minor league team to bring territorial rights for a new team in Sacramento. Because the West Sacramento stadium's site is in Yolo County, which is close to bordering the Stoctkon Ports' home of San Joaquin County, the Ports had territorial rights which extend to West Sacramento.

Tom Seidler, president of the Stockton Ports, was quoted in a press release as wishing the West Sacramento proposal well.

"We wish Mr. Savage and River City Baseball success in completing their stadium in West Sacramento, which will surely become one of the top National Association franchises," he said. "Two new baseball stadiums in the region (West Sacramento and Stockton) will solidify the long-term presence of minor league baseball, one of the best family entertainment values in the country."

Meanwhile, the spectre of litigation has not entirely left the stadium proposal alone. Although a Yolo County judge dismissed an anti-stadium lawsuit filed by the "Friends of Sacramento County," attorney John Latini has tried several times to amend that complaint to fix its defect. The parties involved await a new decision by Judge Timothy Fall on the latest attempt to amend it.

City officials are optimistic that the judge's ruling will be in their favor again. A hearing is scheduled for Friday.

Art Savage expects to bring his newly purchased team, the current Vancouver Canadians, to play in West Sacramento in April, 2000. The team will be an affiliate of the Oakland A's, and will play in the Pacific Coast League.

The lawsuit and the territorial rights negotiations were the two last major hurdles known to be in the way of the West Sacramento stadium project. If no surprises turn up, the Sacramento region will see minor league baseball for the first time since the Sacramento Solons relocated to Hawaii in 1976.

To the center of the earth

Sixty West Sacramento children visited Moaning Cavern in Vallecito, California, in a trip June 5 sponsored by the city's parks and community services department. The children came from five West Sacramento neighborhood programs.

The kids descended 165 feet down a steel spiral staircase into the earth, learning about the cavern's history. Moaning Cavern is the home of prehistoric finds from 13,000 years ago.

The young visitors also had a chance to "mine" for gems, and to visit with exotic species such as iguanas, cockatoos and scorpions.

Yolo High School holds ceremony for Class of 1999

West Sacramento's Yolo Alternative Schools held their 1999 graduation ceremonies last week and 117 local students were awarded diplomas.

"This was an excellent graduating class," said Dean Gaumer, the principal of Yolo Alternative Schools. "Of the 117 students who received diplomas, I believe only three are not currently employed, and we're working on getting them jobs, too. Approximately 30 of our students will be continuing their education at Sacramento City College, and 26 will be entering the armed forces. Others are working in retail businesses and other jobs all over the community and we here at Yolo feel very good about the assistance we've been able to give our students as they begin to venture out into the real world. The graduation ceremonies were really wonderful and all of our graduates have every reason to feel very proud of themselves."

The following scholarships, endowments and awards were presented to Yolo Alternative Schools' seniors at graduation ceremonies last Wednesday, June 9th:

Angie Tellez, West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce; Misty Inman, Gannett Foundation, Inc.; Seneca Storey, Casey Cowen, Romero Acevedo, Angela Lopez, Melanie Clark and Scott Perry, Karen E. Hoffman Endowment; Nootan Prasad, Ezer K. Mathews Memorial Scholarship; Rachel Evenson, Neil McGillivary Memorial Scholarship; Jennifer McDonald, National Service Scholarship; Phillip Bevens (Class of 1998), Rip Van Winkle Alumni Scholarship; Glen Wall and Rachel Evenson, Rotary International of West Sacramento; Nootan Prasad, Melissa Bohannon, Rosanna Virgen, and Fozia Nugent (Class of 1997), Soroptimist International of West Sacramento; Jennifer McDonald, Miller Family Opportunity Scholarship; Dustin Jurach and Wynter Davis, The Money Store/First Union Scholarships; Rosanna Virgen and Rolando Virgen, Washington Unified Indian Education Program; Jonathan Lambdim, Washington Teachers Association; Rachel Evenson, Partnership with El Paso Energy Corporation.

Teachers upset over deal for grad

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

> 'If the kid has the work done, we can sign it off. It's an evaluation done by a competent certificated person who has nothing to do with the kid.'
> Yolo High Principal Dean Gaumer

A number of River City High School teachers are angry after the WUSD school board approved last-minute plans to help one of the school's seniors step around a course grade problem and graduate with his class last week.

Family and friends of the student (who will remain unidentified here due to his youth) appealed to the school board after he failed an elective course and became ineligible to graduate or to participate in graduation ceremonies. The appeal process took them through high school and district administrators to the school board, which listened to testimony from the family and teacher on June 8, then directed staff to find a way to help the youth gain the needed credits.

On June 10, the youth took his elective course work to the district's alternative school, Yolo High School, where he was determined to have earned the needed five units and became eligible to participate in graduation ceremonies June 11.

One of the angry RCHS teachers was Teresa Luttrell, who called the decision a "back room deal."

"What's the point of having standards if we don't stick to them?," she asked.

Teachers' union president Patricia Yamat issued a statement supporting the district's policy of allowing only those who have earned graduation to participate in ceremonies. She said that "by allowing an exception to this practice, however well-meaning, the board denigrates the accomplishments of those students who worked hard and truly met all the necessary standards."

The board's discussion of the youth's predicament appeared to violate state open meeting laws, since the item was not on the agenda. The district's agenda for the closed session portion of the board meeting on June 8 mentioned only expulsion hearings for two students. But district superintendent Dr. Dennis Kelleher (who said he was informed of the late discussion item by board president Pat Flint) said he did not feel discussing the matter broke the law.

"Technically, they can invite parents who have concerns to come and address the board," he explained. "(The board) didn't take any action per se, they didn't vote. They listened and discussed it and talked to staff and said, 'This is our consensus.'"

Past legal interpretations of the open meeting laws have held that even listening to a non-agendized item -- let alone discussing it or making a decision by vote or consensus -- has constituted a breach of the Brown Act.

While the board is prohibited from merely changing a student's grade for convenience sake, said Kelleher, a student does have the opportunity to make up needed classes through "independent study" at Yolo High School, the district's continuation school.

"There are other students who have been enrolled in River City who have gone to Yolo to pick up units in independent study," he said.

Teachers and district officials are prohibited from publicly discussing an individual student's case.

But Yolo High School principal Dean Gaumer, who met with Kelleher the morning after the board meeting, talked about the policies involved in similar instances.

"If the kid has the work done, we can sign it off," said Gaumer. "It's an evaluation done by a competent certificated person who has nothing to do with the kid. We don't tell the instructor the story behind the kid until afterwards."

Gaumer added that it is not necessary for a student to be enrolled for a lengthy period of time in order to be awarded units by Yolo High School. He or she can demonstrate a body of work sufficient to earn subject credit, or can take an exam.

The decision to fast-track a new path to graduation for the youth was made by board members Pat Flint, Ed Hocking, Irene Eklund, Ardeene Westvik and David Farmer. Farmer declined comment on the specifics of the decision, but offered a philosophical comment.

"Each individual case involving students is an individual case," he said. "There is the letter of the law and then there is the spirit of the law."

When asked whether other students in similar graduation predicament received the same treatment, Farmer said he wasn't aware of any other kids "in the same boat."

Correction

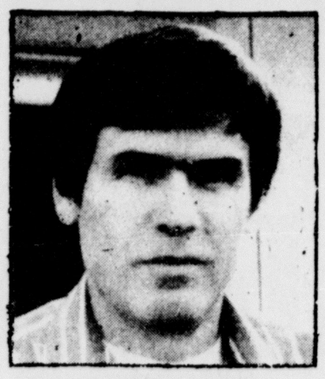

Apologies to the local "Friends of the Library," following some confusion in a News-Ledger article last week on the lawsuit against the city ballpark project.

One of the references to the group suing the city inadvertantly referred to the group as the "Friends of the Library" instead of the "Friends of Sacramento."

The editor hopes readers were more amused than confused.

Men & women just don't laugh at the same things

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

"Dad, I think I've finally figured out why most men have such a warped sense of humor," proudly announced my twenty-something daughter the other evening.

"Warped?" I asked defensively.

"Well, juvenile then."

"But I'm a man," I said with conviction, "and I don't have a warped or a juvenile sense of humor."

"Oh yes you do."

"Oh no I don't."

"You think the Three Stooges are funny, don't you?"

"Well, yes."

"And you and your brother almost fall out of your chairs laughing every time you watch them on television, don't you?"

"Of course. They're hilarious!"

"I rest my case."

"You don't like the Three Stooges?" I asked in amazement.

"They're idiots."

"But you do have to admit, they're very funny idiots."

"No they're not! They slap each other, make gross noises, have food fights, and poke each other in the eye. Now what in the world is funny about that?"

"Is there a point to this?" I finally decided to ask.

"Here," she said, handing me a section of the newspaper, "read the article at the top of the page."

"Which one?"

"The one that explains why men think burping, passing gas and mooning someone is so funny."

As I began to read, I learned that the newspaper article my daughter wanted me to read was written by a woman named Usha Lee McFarling and was entitled "Scientists find where punch line hits brain." In it, Ms. McFarling wrote, "Amid all the marvelous things we humans can do with our big brains -- multiply fractions, write sonnets, design Web pages -- none is quite so mysterious as our ability to enjoy a good joke."

The article went on to say, "Studies of gender differences in humor show women are more likely to enjoy jokes that involve longer narratives, personal information and memories. They seem to be better at taking in linguistic information, making comparisons, solving problems, and connecting intellectual knowledge with their emotions, all of which are needed to appreciate good humor. Men, however, are more likely to enjoy humor scientists would term slapstick: The Three Stooges, men in drag, and bare butt jokes."

"What's a bare butt joke?" I asked.

"You know, gross stuff -- bathroom humor."

"Oh," I said, slightly disappointed.

"That article says a woman's right frontal lobe -- which apparently is largely responsible for a well-developed sense of humor -- simply works better in women than it does in men," explained my daughter.

"Where does it say that men have lousy right frontal brain lobes?" I asked with concern, quickly glancing back down at the article.

"It just implies it," my daughter assured me.

"Oh."

"Have you read the last paragraph yet?"

"No."

"Go ahead," she encouraged me, "it pretty much says it all."

I returned my eyes to the newspaper article and discovered that Ms. McFarling concluded her little report with the words, "I would hate to say that male humor is the humor of the impaired or the infantile, but since science seems to indicate this is true, how can we argue against it?"

"You know what I think Ms. McFarling needs?" I asked my daughter.

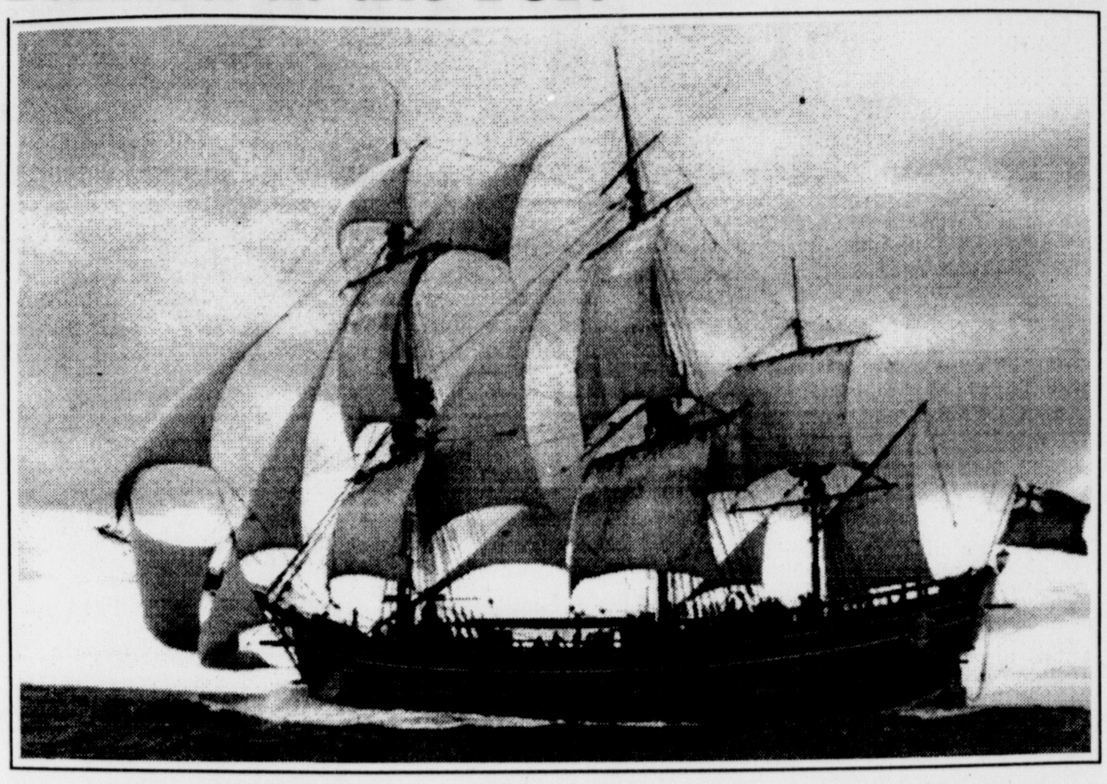

"No. What?"

"A good pie in the face!"

The New York Knicks not only shocked the world but also the Indiana Pacers, winning the Eastern Conference Championship four games to two, The beat-up Knicks will limp their way into the NBA finals in San Antonio without Patrick Ewing and maybe Larry Johnson, who injured his knee and is listed day to day. The Knicks beat the Pacers on sheer determination and heart. While the Pacers defenders stood around watching the Knicks crash the boards, their talented back court Talmud of Houston and Sprewell took over game six. The two Knicks guards had career games, while Pacers shooting All-Star guard, Reggie Miller, who talked a mean game, threw up brick after brick, shooting 3-19 from the field. It was not Miller time at the Garden! Looks like Spike Lee got the last laugh this time.

The Spurs, who have sold over 35,000 seats for their cities first championship series, will have nine days off before they host the Knicks on Wednesday night (6 p.m.-ch.3). The New York Knicks look like a team on a mission and should make this series very interesting. I still believe the Spurs will win the series in six games but I wouldn't bet on it just yet! The Knicks have been underdogs throughout the playoffs and are the only eighth seed to make it to the NBA finals. The Knicks, who are on a mission, must win the first game to upset Mr. Robinson and the leagues best all-round player in Tim Duncan.

The Oakland A's (33-29) with their $20 million team salary pulled out the old broom to complete a three game sweep over the $80 million Dodgers. The A's moved into second place, three games behind the Texas Rangers in the American league West. The A's released pitcher Tom Candiotti last week and his replacement from the farm team, Tim Hudson, allowed only one earned run, while striking out 8 Dodgers, for his first big league win. Hudson first major league start last Tuesday in San Diego was a no-decision but he struck out 11 Padres. It's out with the old and in with the new for the A's.

Now , if they could only win on the road! The A's lead the American league with home wins (21-11) but are only 12-18 on the road. The A's began a 13-game road trip at Cleveland, Detroit, division-leading Texas Rangers and then end up in Disneyland against the Angels. This is a key road trip if the A's are going to be considered a contender for the West. Go River City A's - hey, I like the sound of that!

The Giants (35-28) were in Seattle enjoying their interleague series with the Mariners. The Giants won two out three but their pitching staff took a beating. The Giants batted .373 and outscored Seattle 26-22 in their three game series. The Giants head to Colorado for three games before they return to the 3Com Park on Thursday to host a four game series against Sammy Sosa and the Cubs. Barry Bonds returned to the line-up this week as a DH but only managed 1- 13 performance. Do you think he came back a week to early?

The National League beat the American 68-57 in the first round of interleague play. The Giants are 24-14 against American League teams since the advent of interleague play in 1997. The Florida Marlins (26-14) have the best record.

Boxing returns to Sacramento on Friday, July 2 at the Radisson Hotel featuring West Sacramento's Willie Jorrin (23-0, 12 KO's). Jorrin, who is rated number 5 in the IBF, will put his undefeated record on the line against the number 4 rated Aristead Clayton (21, 1-11 KO's) in a 12 round North American Boxing Federation title bout. This N.A.B.F. championship bout will be at the 122 pound weight limit.

The winner is promised a title bout in October. The card, which is scheduled to start at 5:30 p.m., will include five bouts and will televised live on ESPN2. Tickets prices are $25, $35, and $50 for ringside seats. You can pick up tickets in West Sacramento at Pro-Venture Travel, 1420 Merkley Ave., Suite 6, or by calling 372-9294.

See ya next week!!

Letters to the Editor

In defense of Schumacher

As a River City High School social science teacher, I must comment on the school board's misinterpretation of Mr. Schumacher's political cartoon. The point of the cartoon isn't the behavior of the majority of the students, as it is a commentary on the board's unwillingness to address problems that have negative consequences for the entire school. In other words, the board missed the point. The cartoon is more about the board than the students. There are many wonderful students at River City. Mr. Schumacher aptly illustrated that violent, substance abusers put the majority of good students at risk while the board ignores the truth. The problem must be courageously addressed, not ignored.

Staff input is too often ignored and discouraged by the school board and many ambitious administrators. Initially, Mr. Schumacher wrote the school board a letter of concern about the problem of weapons and drugs on campus. The letter was signed by the majority of the faculty at River City High School. Instead of responsibly replying to the faculty and Mr. Schumacher, the letter was ignored by the board, thus the cartoon image of the ostrich with its head in the sand.

Mr. Schumacher's cartoon is a wake-up call to anyone in this community concerned with student safety and quality of education. I have taught with Mr. Schumacher for eleven years. He has developed an outstanding art program, coached students to success on the Advanced Placement Exam in Art and served as a mentor for the new teachers in the district. Shamefully, board members Irene Eklund and Ed Hocking failed to mention any of Mr. Schumacher's accomplishments and his dedication to the students of River City High School. Ironically, it is teachers like Mr. Schumacher who made it possible to earn the "Distinguished School" award the cowards in this district now hide behind. Ms. Eklund and Mr. Hocking have regrettably chosen to write negative, defensive editorials to deflect from their own incompetence and insecurity.

As a history teacher, I teach many examples of the tragic consequences of good people choosing to do nothing. Too many people in this district avoid the truth in order to promote an image. Mr. Schumacher has courageously chosen to be truthful about a problem that needs attention. As Americans, it is not just our right to express opinions about social problems; it is our duty. Many board members, administrators and teachers have forgotten this lesson in their quest for personal gain.

Graduation standards questioned

At the last meeting of the WUSD Board of Education, the board voted to allow a River City High School student to participate in the graduation ceremony who had not met the graduation requirements. The board's action raises several important questions:

(1) Does the Board of Education hold all the students to the same standards?

(2) Does the Board of Education feel the standards are too rigorous and should be made less demanding for everyone?

(3) Will there be an opportunity for public and staff input if standards and graduation requirements are to be changed?

WTA joins the state in moving toward higher standards for all students and feels the privilege of participating in the graduation ceremony should be reserved (as it has been in the past) for those students who have successfully met or exceeded the requirements. By allowing an exception to this practice, however well-meaning, the Board of Education denigrates the accomplishments of those students who worked hard and truly met all the necessary standards.

An apology – kinda

Reference "Tasteless Opinion" letter to the editor of June 6, 1999.

Ms. Eklund is correct. I do owe the River City High School students who elect not to use drugs or participate in gang activity an apology. My parents, like Ms. Eklunds', taught me to face my errors and acknowledge right from wrong.

Therefore, I apologize to the students of RCHS. I apologize for not creating and submitting my political cartoon to the News-Ledger more swiftly! Perhaps if my cartoon had been published after the first five citations for drugs on our campus I could have prevented the next ten citations.

I apologize. If I had submitted my cartoon along with the letter I sent to district "leaders" with my signature and the signatures of 38 of my peers I could have prevented the next five citations from reaching our campus.

I apologize that my cartoon could not prevent any of the 20 citations issued prior to its being published.

I apologize that I have not done more to make your school a safer and drug free environment.

P.S.. Burglary, vandalism and graffiti are not "a result of aging." The broken windows are still broken.

More support for cartoon

I have been teaching at River City High School for 11 years. I support Mr. Schumacher's attempt to be heard about the safety of our school. The community may not be aware that several attempts have been made by the staff at RCHS to address the concern of on-campus drug and alcohol abuse, all to no avail. The WUSD administration and school board have not responded to our concerns. We have been ignored, and, in fact, told to be quiet. The most that they have managed to accomplish is to schedule a meeting for a committee on safety AFTER school is out. In the meantime, since our first contact with the board, more students have been arrested.

Mrs. Eklund states in her letter her view about "What I believe to be safe campuses." I find this statement ironic in the light of her decisions as a board member. Example: Spring 1990 -- placing a student back into the classroom of a woman teacher. The problem? This male student had drawn a picture of him sodomizing his teacher and left the picture on her desk. The district had given the teacher promises of expulsion, but the board chose to place the student back into her class, without notifying her. That teacher walked out of the classroom, out of the district AND out of the profession of teaching because of that decision.

The board, to this day, continues to place students back into our classrooms who have threatened teachers, and behave in an illegal manner by using drugs and alcohol on this campus. It should be the board's priority to ensure a safe work environment for both staff and students. Instead, it is with a grudging attitude that the district looks to the safety of our school. Shame on you, board and administrators, for calling the teachers the problem and not the source of a solution.

Guest opinion: an injustice

By Teresa Luttrell
Teacher
River City High School

I am a teacher at River City High School writing in response to an action taken by the board of education on June 8. Here's what occurred to the best of my knowledge:

A senior student failed to pass a course and thus did not have enough credits to graduate. The parents of said student complained long and loudly until the school board met in closed session to hear their pleas. The board then decided to allow this student to graduate even though the requirements were not met. Somehow the student was hustled off to Yolo High School where on June 10 (the day prior to graduation) a project was completed in an "independent study course" and a semester of credit was awarded this student.

It is my contention that the action of the board, while possibly well-meaning, was wrong and unjust. This student received special consideration that no other seniors in the same or similar situation were offered. Where's the equity in this situation? A backroom deal was made for one student and the requirements for graduation were circumvented. What's the point of having standards and requirements if we don't stick to them?

I had several seniors who failed to graduate because they did not pass one or more of the proficiency tests. They had four chances to pass the tests their senior year, but because they are limited English students, they were unable to complete this requirement. Should they have been given one, two, three more chances to pass the proficiency tests? Should we have tested them until the day before or perhaps the day of graduation? I think not.

Those students will attend summer school and hopefully pass the tests at that point. Did they deserve to participate in graduation? No, they didn't meet the requirements. Neither did the student whom the board allowed to graduate without having enough credits.

What's the message the board sent to all the seniors who did earn their diplomas? Those kids worked hard to earn the right to be on that stage. The message they got was that deals can be made regardless of rules. What's the message to teachers? We can ignore the grades students earn any time we wish to do so. What's the message to the administration? We can ignore requirements or bend the rules against your advice. And finally, what did the student in question learn? I don't have to follow your rules and meet your requirements.

The board's action made a mockery of the hard work and accomplishments of those seniors who successfully met the requirements. A dangerous precedent has been set and an injustice done.

Thanks, clubs

I would like to publicly thank the West Sacramento Rotary Club and the West Sacramento Kiwanis for their ongoing financial support of programs in the Washington Unified School District.

This year, the West Sacramento Rotary Club provided over 130 students with beautiful new coats. The students were delighted with their surprise coats and welcomed the warmth they provided the week before Christmas. In addition, they funded eye exams and glasses for approximately eight students who have no other resources to obtain an examination and/or necessary glasses.

The Kiwanis Club also backs us by providing the resources to see that another eight students got eye exams and glasses. Kiwanis also sponsors the wonderful summer camp program that so many of our West Sacramento children are able to be a part of!

The school children of West Sacramento and the school district staff wish to honor both organizations for their ongoing commitment to our community.

Thank you!

Will our levees catch fire?

First we hear of that fire near Tracy burning numerous tires for weeks, if not months....is it out yet? And now we're hearing of old tires being used for raising or building river levees up around Oroville (Butte County). Are they treating the old tires to render them non-flammable? While I did not until recently think of rubber as being flammable, the Tracy fire tells me otherwise....maybe it's the chemical additives?

So will the levee-builders add other chemicals to render the recycled tires non-flammable? Imagine levees of the future catching fire and causing flooding because the outer half caught fire and the remaining inner half not being strong enough to hold back the river.

Maybe a chemical expert can let us know why a flammable product is suitable for use. Remember, it takes only one "out-of-control" campfire, cigarette butt, etc., to cause a fire, especially during the hot summer months ahead.

The Sacramento River registered 4 feet 1 inch U. S. gauge at the S. P. bridge yesterday

The utility or inutility of weirs in the Sacramento River is being exemplified at this moment at the mouth of the American River where a great sand bar stops navigation, or in a few days will completely prevent any steamers from going up stream. The most northerly weir in the Sacramento River above Rocky Point is separated from the sandbank by only a few feet and the river current is only wide enough for a small steamer to get by. Besides the turn in the channel is so sharp that in a few days no steamer drawing more than three feet of water can pass this point. Two years ago when a protest was registered with Colonel Rand about the building of these weirs he wasn't at all modest about telling the Washington Improvement Club that their case was not to be considered, for it must be "the greatest good for the greatest number," meaning that if weirs were to be built in the river channel they would be built for the benefit of Sacramento, leaving Yolo County out in the cold. Evidently Colonel Rand forgot that the steamers plying on the river were mostly owned by Sacramento people.

EXTENSION OF JITNEY SERVICE TAKEN UP AGAIN

At the request of the Washington Improvement Club a committee, consisting of E. A. Palm and P. A. Fitzgerald, called on C. W. McKillup, Superintendent of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, last Tuesday, asking that the question of extension of jitney service to Washington and Riverbank be taken up.

Mr. McKillup assured the committee that he would take the matter up with the corporation, but personally he could extend no hope for the extension, because at this writing the jitney service in Sacramento is far from being satisfactory either in a financial way or as a substitute for street car service.

When West Sacramento townsite was opeend up this question was considered and a bonus was offered to make good any deficit that might occur through the service. The P. G. & E. could not see a chance to make a gain and hence the installation of the West Side Railroad, which still operates cars to West Sacramento headquarters.

Mr. McKillup assured the committee that he would be able to answer one way or the other before the next meeting of the club.

This question was brought up at the meeting of the Improvement Club on June 1st. One of those present asked the Chairman "What can be done to start things going in Washington in the most lively way?" One lady replied that she thought if street car service was supplied, following the installation of a gas supply, the advancement would be well on its way in a substantial manner.

The next meeting of the club will likely be able to return some satisfactory answer on this question.

MAY CONSOLIDATE SCHOOLS.

The first step taken for the consolidation of River View school, four miles south of Washington, with the Washington school, were taken last Friday when the trustees of both schools asked County Superintendent of Schools Harriet Lee for petition blanks calling for a special election for the purpose of voting on the question of consolidation. These petitions must be signed by a majority of the heads of families and the blanks must be completed and the election held before July 1st.

PREPARING FOR CONCRETE ROAD ON LEVEE

The application of District No. 785 in Yolo County to raise and widen its levee along the Sacramento River, has been set for hearing on June 18th, by the State Reclamation Board. According to the estimate of Asa G. Proctor, engineer of the district, the improvements will cost about $20,000. A clam shell dredge will be employed to do the work.

POPULATION OF WASHINGTON ESTIMATED AT 1500

In an effort to arrive at the exact population of the town of Washington, the Independent wrote Congressman C. F. Curry on May 11th, asking that as soon as the Census Bureau could secure it the figure be sent to this paper.

In reply Congressman Curry wrote under date of June 2d.

House of Representatives, U. S.
Washington, D. C.
June 2, 1920.

P. A. Fitzgerald, Esq., The Independent, Broderick, Calif.

My Dear Mr. Fitzgerald:

When I received your favor of the 11th ult. in reference to the population of the town of Washington, Yolo County (Postoffice Broderick) I took the matter up with the Director of the Census.

It has been impossible to secure the 1920 census report of the population of Washington, Calif., as the town is unincorporated and the Bureau does not compile the population statistics of unincorporated towns. The Director of the Census made an effort to secure the information you wished for me, but has been unable to do so.

I am very sorry that my letter does not contain more favorable information. With best wishes, believe me.

Sincerely yours,
C. F. CURRY.

Judging from the fact that at this writing there is not a vacant house in Washington, Riverbank or West Sacramento, it is estimated that the population of those three is fully 1500 people.

Later on the exact figure may be procurred and as a request of this paper stands for an answer at the Census Bureau an answer may be expected soon.

In the first Supervisor District of Yolo County, that is the portion contiguous to Sacramento and immediately tributary thereto, the population is estimated at about 4500.

This population is composed mostly of home owners, farmers and a very prosperous class of people. These people do all their trading in Sacramento, going to Woodland, the county seat, only on rare occasions for legal business and for tax paying.

The business of this portion of Yolo County is transacted almost entirely in Sacramento.

It extends from Elk Horn to the southern extremity of the county and includes the rich district north of Washington, West Sacramento, the Lisbon District, the Holland Land Company, Clarksburg and a great stretch of very valuable land south of Clarksburg.

More families have been added every day to this district and a constant stream of trade is pouring into the capital city over the bridges that cross the river and the ferries that ply thereon.

TWO MORE STOCK INSPECTORS NAMED FOR YOLO COUNTY

The Department of Agriculture, Office of Cattle Protection, has appointed two additional inspectors to represent the Office of Cattle Protection in Yolo County, viz: L. J. Hoffman, Fifth and Beamer streets, Woodland, who is to take care of the inspections at Yolo, Woodland, Davis, Knights Landing and Merrits. E. B. Hart, Winters, is to take care of the inspections at Winters. Hoffman and Hart are succeeding L. W. Bryant, our former inspector at Yolo, who has resigned.

Cattle will not be accepted at any shipping point or by any common carrier unless a certificate of inspection, issued by the inspector is filed with the agent therefor at time of shipment. All cattle to be slaughtered must be inspected at the slaughterhouse by the inspector for marks and brands before the same can be slaughtered.

No person can engage in the slaughtering of cattle as a business before obtaining a license from the State and filing a bond in compliance with the law. Failure to do so renders the person so doing liable to fine and imprisonment and closes his slaughter house for a period of one year.

Bills of sale must be obtained when cattle are purchased and must be shown to the inspector. All cattlemen who intend to ship cattle and all slaughterers intending to slaughter cattle purchased by them must inform the inspector at least 24 hours before shipment or before cattle are slaughtered, by notifying the inspector nearest the shipping corral or slaughter house.

GORED TO DEATH BY VICIOUS BULL NEAR FREEPORT

John C. Yenger, a dairyman of Freeport, was gored to death early Wednesday by a bull. Yenger died before aid could reach him after the infuriated animal had pierced his abdomen.

The bull, known to be particularly dangerous, had been kept chained in a corral. At about 5 o'clock Wednesday morning Yenger, who has been a dairyman in the Freeport district for many years, discovered that the bull had broken loose, and gone to the pasture. He attempted to drive the animal back into the corral.

The bull attacked his owner and drove his horns into Yenger's body. Death came almost instantaneously. The body was taken charge of by Coroner John T. Skelton of Sacramento County.

Yenger leaves a widow and toree small children. He was 50 years old and a native of Iowa.

PEAR CROP ESTIMATED AT 1500 TONS.

WOODLAND, June 2.—The Yolo County pear crop for 1920 was estimated at 1500 tons for a minimum yield this morning by County Horticultural Commissioner Wm. Gould in his report to the California Pear Growers' Association.

The normal crop runs about 2500 tons, but considering climatic conditions, the yield is more than expected by the growers. The largest orchard is the Rose orchard near Sacramento, on this side of the river. Here the Bartlett crop will be almost up to normal, though the cost of maintaining this average will reduce the profit far below normal.

County & city fund local probation position

The Yolo County Probation Department and West Sacramento Police Department jointly announced on June 2 that they would share the costs of placing a new deputy probation officer in full-time duty with the police department's youth services bureau.

The new position would be funded with 75 percent of salary and benefits coming from the county, and 25 percent from West Sacramento.

The city will also provide office supplies and office space, while the county will pay transportation and information technology costs.

The deputy probation officer assigned to the West Sacramento position is Jum Metzen, a five-year Probation Department veteran. The youth services division is led by Lt. David Farmer and Sgt. Don Cox of the West Sacramento Police Department.

The team hopes to enhance services including home visits to probationers and increased contact with those who have violated probation terms; responses to parents needing advice regarding juvenile delinquency, working with school authorities on cases; and other actions.
